Thornwell recognizes the rights of applicants, clients, families, parents/guardians, legal custodians and other stakeholders to raise concerns or complaints. If at any time, an individual wishes to express dissatisfaction with services received, or feels their rights have been violated, they may engage in the grievance procedure which may result in making a formal grievance. Thornwell has a formal grievance mechanism and ensures that any individual is free to express complaints without interference or fear of retaliation.

Directions: Complete in order as many steps as you feel necessary until your grievance is resolved. Circle and complete the appropriate option that you wish to pursue.

The following are steps to file a formal grievance:

 The first step is for the individual who has a concern, complaint, or grievance to speak directly to the staff member involved, if they feel comfortable doing so. Thornwell encourages open communication in these situations when it is safe, and appropriate to do so. If the individual does not feel comfortable addressing the issue, they may bring it to the attention of another staff member with whom they are working.
